keeping of General Bevr. w.

Parsons Ellifort, Baldwin and Ford, were sent from the Penitentiary yesterday morning, by order of the Governor to Louisville to be committed to the

There are some prominent officers in the Federal army who deserve the straps on their shoulders-and more too.

It is highly desirable that positions in the Army be filled by promotions from the ranks, and it is also disirable that some officers be transferred to the ranks. Both measures would have a most salutary effect.

The N. Y. Herald persists in calling Gen. McClellan."Our young Napoleon." Napoleon at what age, Mr. Herald?

Two Desiderata.

Next to large accessions to the Federal army, we need a good many resignations in it-around Washington.

Notwithstanding the fact that the oppressive heat and superabundance of dust would admonish one to remain at home and keep quiet in order to keep cool, yet we observe that there is little or no diminution in travel on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. The congeniality of spirit and the affability of manner that characterize the gentlemanly corps of Conductors who officer the trains on that road, and the punctuality to time and dispatch in business, cannot fail to render that important and indispensable thoroughfare popular both with the business man and pleasure-seeker. We congralulate the company on securing the services of such men as Fish C. Henny, WM. TAYLOR, TOM. BERRY, WM. KNOX, and WM. Sweeney. Notwithstanding the many mishaps and drawbacks to the road from guerrilla raids, there are still good locomotives and comfortable cars, and likely to continue to be.

We learn that Mr. Ras. Poures, of Allen county, Ky., brother of Dr. Pontes, of Bowling-Green, was killed on the stances: The negro had been directed to perform a piece of work, and on his noncorrect him, when the negro struck Mr. P. with a club, killing him instantly. The negro made his escape.

The cars are now running on the Memphis Branch of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad from Bowling-Green to the Fair Grounds, on Red River, about one mile and a half out from Clarksville. It is thought the bridge across the river will be repaired in a short time, when the cars will go through to Clarksville. Mr. A. HAINES is the officer in charge of the train on that road, than whom a cleverer or more obliging and accommodating gentleman one rarely meets with.

The new Railroad depot at Bowling-Green is rapidly approaching completion. The energy with which the work is being pushed forward will certainly make it but a short time before it can be occupied by the company. It is not on so extensive a plan as the one destroyed by the rebels in their hasty evacuation of that place, but is located on the same site. The temporary building that has been put up and being used now, is totally inadequate to the demands of the road.

THEATRE "Clarisse; or, the Soldier's Bride," a most beautiful operatic and military drama, will be the first feature for this evening. Mrs. HATTIR REBNARD will appear as Clarisse, and will favor the audience with one of her most happy efforts in the way of vocalization. After which Mr. DUFFIELD will, for the second time- sing the popular song of, "Tis my Country's Call.", Then follows a dance by Miss Constantine; and the whole is to conclude with the well known Burletta of Jenny Lind, which abounds with musical gems, and will be interpreted by Durrging, Evraurr and Mrs. Bus-

Con. R. FRANCE .- It will be seen by the advertisement in our issue this morning, that this popular Manager has taken the Library Association Company, under the management of R. France & Co. Col. FRANCE has been identified with the Maryland Lotteries for more than a quarter of a century, and more recently with the Shelby College Lottery, both of which have ever been popular with the people, as all prizes have been promptly paid and all business conducted in a legitimate manner. We can assure our readers who wish to try their inch in Lotteries, that they can have full confidence under their management. - Louisville Express.

The advertisement referred to above will be found in our columns this morning. Our readers may find it to their advantage to give it a careful perusal.

We learn from a reliable gentleman, who has just returned to the city from Huntaville, Alabama, that one hundred and ten persons who had left the Southern army came into that place, on Saturday last, and tendered their services to Gen. Rousseau.

A THE WAY

BATTLE CREEK, TENN., July 13, '62. This is the furthest point at which our cops are now stationed on their way to East Tennessee, and it is as far in that d rection as we are likely to go without a little fighting, which will most likely be indulged in in disputing the passage of the river. The place is named after a battle which occurred here some years ago between a body of white people and the Indians. The appearance of the country in the immediate vicinity considerably reminds me of the ground on which the famous contest at Corinth was decided, with the exception that there is more cleared territory here, while the growth of the "black-jack," or scrub cak, is still the same.

THE COMMANDER OF THE ADVANCE. Since the occupancy of the advance by the National forces, Colonel Turchin, as Acting Brigadier, has had command, but that officer now being before a Court Martial on sundry charges, Col. Harris is the supreme power until such a period as General Haskell shall assign to relieve

The advance will, on the arrival of the full force of General Buell, belong to General McCook, now the next in com-mand to Gen. B. His force is en route for Battle Creek in about the same style us that referred to by me in my former letter letters-and will all, most probably, reach this vicinity by the end of the present week. Whether they will then make a further advance, and how soon, I am unwilling to say. The troops are all anxious to be again brought face to face with their foes, and even though weak in numbers comparative to those of the Confederacy, they long for the sound of the "long roll" which shall call them to arms.

THE ENEMY'S DEPENSES.

During the last ten days the Secession force has been gathering in considerable numbers, both at Chattanooga, and at a point on the Tennessee opposite Battle Creek, and also at the aforementioned town, the combined forces numbering, it is said, about thirty thousand men. These are known to be gathering on our front, and are now in our immediate sight, digging rifle pits, and otherwise fortifying themselves, and preparing for us as warm a reception as it may lay in their power to furnish. There is something rather exciting in this being with the immediate force of the enemy, which can only be felt by those who have experienced it.

The preparations known to be going on for a contest involving life and liberty, the continued arrival and changing of osition among the troops and the thousand incidents belonging to such a scene cannot fail to engage the attention of any one to whose lot it may fall to observe them. Our own forces are also actively engaged in making similar defenses on our side of the river, most probably for the purpose of engaging the at-tention of the Secesh until we shall be ready for an advance movement.

During the last week something in the way of trade compliance, Mr. Porren attempted to and barter had been going on, the Nationals exchaging ground coffee for an article known as Sounthern whiskey .-An idea having become prevalent among these merchant volunteers that the rebel volunteers were watering the whisky which they traded, conceived a design by which they contrived to get even with them. They ground the coffee and after using it for their own purposes, dried the dregs in the sun, and then handed it over to the Secesh in payment for the watered whisky. So, between the two it is difficult to ell which is the most swindled. The olunteers of both sides go into the river for bathing purposes, hold long conversations across the river, which at this point is not over two hundred feet wide, o you see they are not likely to be without company, so long as they are not ar-To travel with him, is but to prove our rayed in hostile array against their new made acquaintances.

The Robels Want Clear Weather to Fight In.

[From the Richmond Whig, 1700 Restort.] MAKE HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES.

We have heard a fanciful man delare that the Confederate arms never achieved a complete triumph except on a clear day. We knew an intelligent gentleman who predicted last summer that the Yankees would turn the tables on us so soon as the weather became cold. His prediction was based on actual observation of the variable capacity for labor of the Irish and Dutch, of which the Yankee armies are mainly composed, during hot and cold weather. Beginning with the battle of Bethel, which occurred on the 19th of June-a beautiful day-our arms met with a succession of triumphs throughout the summer and until the battle of Drainesville, which happened in cold nothing but a succession of reverses throughout the winter months, until Shilob, which was fought on a warm, clear Sunday. The next day—a miserable rainy Monday—we were compelled to abandon most of our captures of the day before. Since Shiloh and the setting in of warm weather our arms have been again victorious, almost without a reverse of any consequence.

Without drawing any general principle from these facts, it may be well for us to inquire whether the natives of the South are not better able to bear its heats than foreigners accustomed to a less enervaing climate. The conclusion we draw is the same drawn by the press of the country generally, on other grounds, viz: to months of sunshine and warmth-remain to us. During these months, it is fair to presume that the Southern soldier can fight his best-far better than when the plasts of autumn and winter have chilled his blood and numbed his muscles. Shall these months pass idly by? We believe not. Our authorities will make glad the hearts of the people, and make sure our independence, by ordering every General in the field to press with vigor on, to strike while the iron is hot, to make hay while the sun shines, and cease not till fire and sword are carried beyond the Ohio and Potomac.

> A Fearful Scene. From the Pittsburg Chronide, 20th.

During the late exhibition of Van Amourgh's menagerie at Monongahela City, a fearful and exciting scene occurred. I appears that shortly after the audience had assembled, a terrific storm arosa which tore the canvas into rags and threatened serious injury to the spectators. While the Storm King roared and revelled, one of the huge tigers gut out of his cage, which added new terror to the scene. The vast assembly swayed from side to side, first to that part of the tent which had been blown off, and then to the main entrance. Some jumped from the top of the seats out through the opening between the top and the circular inclosure; others cut themselves a passage through the canvas, and all rushed with alarm for any place by which all hostilities between the of escape, preferring to brave the storm to staking their chance for life amid the crashing timbers and furious wild beasts. Women shricked for help, and children cried; strong men looked pale, and taking the confusion o the multitude, and the raging of the storm, the scene was fearful and appalling. The keepers of the animals stood by the cages of these wild denizens of the woods and jungles with anxious looks. The man who kept the elephant Hannibal stood in front of the huge brute with his hands upon his tusks, as pale as a corpse, One of the lions had partaken of the excitement, and his glaring eye-balls, erect posture, and extended and flowing mane, gave an idea of how he looks in his nalive forest. The tiger which had escaped rom his cage, was driven back by Mr. Van Amburg into the same cage with this ion, and the king of the woods had put his huge paw upon him, and was holding him tight upon the floor. Nature, grand and terrible, was no exhibition at this

After some moments of fearful confusion the storm ceased, and the audience separated, but not until several had been injured from being tvampled on and bruised in the general confusion which prevailed. The editor of the Republican, from whom we get the above account, fixes the damage done to dresses and bonnets alone, at two thousand dollars.

A CONFIRMED GRUMBLES. -- Some time ago there lived in Edinburg a wellknown grumbler named Sandy Black, whose often-recurring fits of spleen or indignation propuced some amusing scenes of senseless irritability, which were highly relished by all except the brute's good, patient little wife. One morning Sandy rose bent on a quarrel the haddies and eggs were excellent done to a tune, and had been ordered by himself the previous evening; and breakfast passed without the looked for cause of complaint.

What will you have for dinner, Sansaid Mrs. Black.

A chicken, madam," said the husband. "Roast or boiled ?" asked the wife. "Confound it, madam, if you had been a good and considerate wife, you'd have known before this what I liked," Sandy growled on, and slamming the door behind him, he left the house. It was in the spring, and a friend who was present heard the little wife say, "Sandy's bent on a disturbance to-day; I shall not please him, do what I can. The dinner time came, and Sandy and his friend sat down to dinner; the fish was eaten in silence, and, on raising the cover of the dish before him, in a towering passion he called out, " boiled chicken, I hate it, madam. A chicken boiled is a chicken spoiled.'

Immediately the cover was raised for another chicken, roasted to a turn. Madam, I won't eat roast chicken, roared Sandy; "you know how it should have been cooked!" At the instat a broiled chicken, with ushrooms, was placed on the table. "Without green peas!" roared the grum-

"Here they are, dear," said Mrs. Black. How dare you spend my money in "They were a present," said the wife, interrupting him.
